FOREWORD

Calcutta University has been one of the most fortunate institutions of the country which attracted donations from all classes of people, irrespective of language, community or religion. These endowments first started coming to this University from 1862, 5 years after the establishment of the University, and they are still coming to us—over a span of more than a century. The records of all these endowments are now scattered over a large number of publications. Previously all information relating to such endowments was published in the University Calendar. But unfortunately it has not been possible to publish such calendars after 1956, and so information about the endowments received after 1950 has to be collected from other sources which are not easily available to the students and the public. Moreover, it is not an easy task to collect necessary information about a particular endowment or endowments from the pages of the University Calendar, a very voluminous publication with about 1800 pages. So it was decided to publish summary of the necessary information about our endowments in the form of a hand-book so that interested students and scholars, educationist and donors may easily know all information that they need about medals, prizes, scholarships, lectureships etc. currently available at the University.

The first endowment in the University was created by the late Prasunno Coomar Tagore by a will executed in 1862. Tagore was a member of the first Senate of Calcutta University, and his princely gift was given for the creation of the Tagore Law Professorship—the first Professorship in Indian Universities. The funds were formally received by the University in 1868 after the death of Tagore; and the first Tagore Law Professor, Mr. Herbert Cowell, delivered his lectures in 1870. This is one of the most prestigious Professorship of this University and many of the lectures have won the admiration of scholars all over the world. The second endowment—Premchand Roychand Research Studentship (P.R.S.) from the late Premchand Roychand of Bombay was received in 1866, 2 years earlier than the Tagore Law Professorship Lectures. The third large gift was received in 1893 from Mr. Sibley who was a member of the Senate. This provided for the payment of scholarships to the students of the Engineering College. All these endowments received upto the end of the 19th century were no doubt of material help to the University in its task of promotion of learning. The beginning of this century was characterised by a very significant change in the nature and functions of this University and this was helped by the gifts which came from some of the large donors. This period marks the beginning of the age of Sir Asutosh in our University. He conceived the idea of converting the University from a purely examining body to that of a teaching-cum-affiliating institution. The inspired endowments received in the first quarter of this century were all directed towards the fulfilment of this objective. The first large endowment received in 1908 came from Sri S. K.

Lahiri who handed over the copyright of the book, "Lahiri's Select Poems" to the University for the award of a gold medal in memory of his father. Later on, the proceeds of this book were utilised in 1913 to institute a Fellowship in the History of Bengali Language and Literature. The first Fellow was Professor Dines Chandra Sen. In 1930 this Fellowship was converted to a Professorship named after the father of the donor, Sri Ramtanu Lahiri.

The next important gift came in 1912 from Sir Tarak Nath Palit, who made a number of princely gifts totalling more than Rs. 18 lakhs for the promotion and diffusion of scientific and technical education and the cultivation and advancement of science, pure and applied, among his countrymen by and through indigenous agency. The first Trust Deed executed in June, 1912 provided for the creation of two posts of Professorships, one in Physics and one in Chemistry, and in this way marked the beginning of Post-graduate teaching and research under the University. The first Palit Professor of Chemistry was Acharya Prafulla Chandra Ray who joined his post in 1916 and the first Palit Professor of Physics was Acharya C. V. Raman who joined in 1917. This Trust Deed also transferred the land and building at 92, Upper Circular Road (now known as 92, Acharya Prafulla Chandra Road) to the University. Sir Taraknath Palit also executed another Trust Deed in October 1912, bequeathing his house at 35, Ballygunge Circular Road and other properties to the University.

The next substantial gift came from Sir Rashbihari Ghosh in August 1913 for the creation of four Professorships in Applied Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry and Botany with special reference to agriculture. These Professorships were created in 1914. Sir Rashbihari Ghosh made a second gift on December, 1919 for purposes of technical instruction and research, and provided for the creation of two Professorships in Applied Chemistry and Applied Physics. This gift was made during the Vice-Chancellorship of Sir Nilratan Sarkar. Sir Rashbihari Ghosh made a third gift in his will, accepted by the Senate in August, 1921 for a few Travelling Fellowships for scholars going to foreign Universities.

The next large gift came from the house of Khairas,—which provided for five Professorships in Indian Fine Arts (the Rani Bageswari Professor), Phonetics, Physics, Chemistry and Agriculture (all known as Guruprasad Singh of Khaira Professor). These chairs were created in 1921, and the first holder of the Rani Bageswari Professor was Sri Abanindranath Tagore, and the first holders of the other chairs were Professor Suniti Kumar Chatterji (Indian Linguistics and Phonetics), Prof. Meghnad Saha (Physics), Professor J. N. Mukherjee (Chemistry) and Professor Nagendranath Ganguli (Agriculture).

This University is still very fortunate in receiving large and small gifts from generous donors. These are very important and help the University in various ways. But the endowments that were received in the first quarter of this century were of very special significance as these enabled the University authorities to set up teaching and research departments and to gather together a brilliant group of teachers, of whom any University in the world would be proud. The high reputation that Calcutta University secured in the twenties and thirties of this century was made possible with the help of these noble gifts.

The University has also been receiving large gifts exceeding a lakh of rupees from a number of donors over the past sixty years. Mention should here be made of the V. L. Mitra endowment, which enabled this University to establish the College of Home Science for the girl students. Another important characteristic of these large gifts was that some of them came from the teachers. The largest amount received so far from the teachers was the endowment made by the late Professor Harendra Coomar Mukherjee, who rose later to be the Chancellor of this University. In this category we would like to mention the names of Dr. Nilratan Dhar, Professor J. P. Niyogi and others, whose gifts are gratefully remembered by this University.

In addition to these large gifts the University has received endowments from many donors for the award of medals, prizes and scholarships to the students. The first gift was received from Sri Eshanchandra Ghosh of Calcutta known as the Eshan Scholarship, the award starting from the year 1866. The next that we have been able to trace was the Duff Scholarships (1866), the Ritchie Prize (1867) and others. The total number of such small endowments were more than 350 (on the basis of the Financial Estimates for 1975-76). The total corpus of all these endowments including large ones was Rs. 1,52,06,759, (end of March 1974) and the annual receipts were Rs. 15.96 lakhs out of which those from small endowments amounted to Rs. 4.75 lakhs.

As the task of managing these endowments has grown larger the University decided to up a separate Trust Office after the Calcutta University Act of 1966 was implemented, and placed an officer in charge of its administration. The Officer-in-charge Sri Jagadishwar Pal took a keen interest in the publication of the hand-book and the collection of these materials for publication has been done by Sri Harakali Sen Gupta and the staff of the office and thanks are specially due to them. I hope that this hand-book will serve useful purposes in providing necessary information to the students, scholars and teachers.

Name of endowment and year of creation	: Tagore Law Professorship. Created in 1870.
Name of donor	: The Hon'ble Prasunna Coomar Tagore.
Periodicity of appointment	: Annual.
Honorarium	: Rs. 9000/-.
Objective of endowment	: To have a complete course of lectures on a topic of outstanding juristic or legal significance in Indian or International Law delivered by an expert on the subject.
Eligibility	: An Indian or a non-Indian jurist.
Conditions of appointment	: (1) The topics, more than one, will be selected by the University and advertised in April every year in the High Courts, Supreme Court and in the Universities having a Faculty of Law in India, in Indian newspapers, in a number of Universities in the U.K. and U.S.A. and in a newspaper in the U.K. The venue of publicity and the newspapers in which the publicity is to be made will be determined by the University. (2) After the lectures are delivered the University will have the copy-right of the first edition of the lectures. (3) The University will publish not less than 1100 copies of the work and send a copy to the Professor himself. (4) 200 copies of the work will be distributed free by the University. (5) After defraying the expenses of publication, including publicity and after deduction of the cost of 200 copies of the printed work for free distribution, the net profit from the sale of the first edition will be shared by the University with the Professor on a fifty-fifty basis. (6) If, however, the University is unable to publish the lectures as soon as possible, permis-

Conditions of appointment (Contd.)

- sion may be given to the Professor to have the lectures printed on his own, provided he presents 25 copies of the work, as soon as it is published, to the University for free distribution and retention for future reference.
- (7) Payment of honorarium will be made after completion of delivery of the lectures.
 - (8) If necessary, the Professor may be paid return travelling expenses and hospitality charges, funds permitting.
 - (9) For the benefit of the students of Law Colleges of the Calcutta University who have attended at least 75% of the lectures delivered, the Professor shall set a question paper on a few salient points of his lectures. The answerscripts of such students that may take the examination will have to be evaluated by the Professor himself. On the basis of his evaluation two medals, a gold and a silver one, termed Maharaja Sir J. M. Tagore Medals, will be awarded to the students who come first and second in order of merit.

Remarks

: (1) Procedure for making applications.

Along with an application supplicating for the Professorship a candidate must submit 12 copies of the synopsis of the lectures on the topic selected by him as also 12 copies of the introductory lecture, i.e., the first lecture so as to reach the Registrar by the 31st December of the year of appointment.

The synopsis should not be a bare enumeration of the headings but should be such as to enable the adjudicators to form therefrom an idea both of the subject matter and of the method of treatment.

- (2) The candidate who is adjudged best and informed of his appointment to the Professorship shall, within six months of receipt of such information, forward to the Registrar a complete copy (manuscript or type-written) of the lectures he proposes to deliver. If the lectures are further adjudged complete and ready for the press, the candidate will be asked to deliver the lectures at his earliest convenience.

- (3) If however, the Professor fails to submit a complete copy of his lectures, as required above, or if in the opinion of the University the copy submitted is incomplete and not ready for the press, the Professor may be granted an extension of time upto a maximum period of one year to complete his lectures or his appointment may be cancelled altogether, depending on circumstances whether or not, in the opinion of experts, the lectures are capable of coming up to the requisite standard or not, after revision by the Professor.
- (4) Depending on circumstances where appointment to the Professorship cannot be made in the usual way in a particular year the University may invite a jurist of repute to deliver a course of lectures on a subject to be chosen by him.
